Preguntas con títulos que contienen palabras clave

1. Flying with a poster tube as a hand luggage

2. When can you call yourself doctor?

3. Should I hide the fact that I did a group assignment completely by myself?

4. Self-Plagiarism in PhD thesis

5. Is it acceptable to write a reference letter for yourself?

6. Is it self-plagiarism to reuse my own unpublished material?

7. Should I quit my PhD - workload, self-esteem and social life

8. How to deal with an inappropriate greeting in an email?

9. Letter writer snapped at my reminder email. What can I do in the future to prevent this, and should I still accept his letter?

10. Is it wrong to repeat yourself in the abstract, introduction and conclusions?

11. How to answer the question "tell me about yourself" in a Masters degree interview?

12. How to cite oneself as co-author without all names, for resume or presentation?

13. EU Ph.D. in Germany: Calling yourself "Dr." or "Ph.D."

14. As a student with questions about a paper, can I email the author myself or should I ask someone else to contact him?

15. How should I introduce myself (a graduate student) at a conference?

16. Is asking your PhD supervisor a basic question considered inappropriate?

17. Using nonstandard gender-neutral pronouns to refer to myself in academic writing

18. Is reusing old code for a new assignment considered self plagiarism? How to protect yourself if you consider it to be, and a group partner does not?

19. As a PhD student, I want to limit myself to 40 hrs/week. How to maintain this boundary?

20. Why are journals telling me that my article is plagiarized even though I wrote it by myself?

21. How to cite self-created images or pictures in thesis

22. Should you recuse yourself from the hiring committee if you have had a past romantic relationship with an applicant?

23. Is it inappropriate to tell my students to check their school email?

24. I have been accused of copying two lab reports from the previous year even though I had done everything by myself

25. Should I introduce myself to my supervisor via e-Mail or set up an appointment to introduce myself?

26. Is it inappropriate for a student to attend their mentor's dissertation defense?

27. My professor is not teaching his online course himself, but uses publicly available videos instead. Is this appropriate?

28. Whether to use Dr or Prof when addressing oneself in an email?

29. Is it considered a self-plagiarism to reuse (published) abstracts for talks?

30. As a self-learner, what to do with books providing exercises but not solutions?

31. What careers not requiring an academic degree might be open to a self-learner who wants to do research on pure mathematics?

32. Why is the concept of self plagiarism in coursework not manifestly absurd?

33. Is there a standard of professionalism in academia requiring me to hide self-harm scars if I'm otherwise comfortable leaving them exposed?

34. Can I call myself an assistant professor without a PhD?

35. Should the slides in a presentation be self-explanatory or be as minimal as possible?

36. Is it rude to send a self-correction followup email to professor?

37. How to define "self-citation"?

38. My PhD supervisor is starting a formal procedure to remove himself as my supervisor

39. Thinking about leaving academia for good. I am feeling guilty and disappointed in myself. Any thoughts/advice?

40. Points to remember when having to write recommendation letter yourself

41. How to deal with a PhD student who is slow and disengaged

42. How should I credit co-authors of a paper in conference proceedings I prepared myself?

43. How should I respond to a reviewer's complaint about self-citation?

44. Counter strategy against group that repeatedly does strategic self-citations and ignores other relevant research

45. Should self-citations be excluded when calculating the h-index?

46. Is it correct to call oneself "Doctor/Scientist/Mathemathician" simply because one has a PhD in that field?

47. I am able to self-fund a PhD, how can I use this when applying?

48. If you have no choice, is it acceptable to translate a recommendation letter for yourself?

49. I unintentionally self-plagiarized in my graduate courses last semester and just realized, what should I do?

50. How do I reassure myself that I am a worthy candidate for a tenure-track position, when department would likely have interviewed me even if I wasn't?

51. Is it possible to get a research grant without any degree as a person that has a self-learning mentality?

52. Is it risky or inappropriate to mention a history of substance abuse in a PhD application personal statement?

53. Why do " 'inclusive' access" textbooks normally self-destruct after a year or so?

54. Attitudes towards self-plagiarism

55. How do I use lemmas that are probably already proven, but including the proof myself is quicker than looking up a source?

56. Is it inappropriate to ask department staff for syllabi previously used for courses I am to teach in upcoming year?

57. Is it ethical to deny someone co-authorship who had not had the chance to contribute to the text itself?

58. How to self teach mathematics?

59. Is it normal for collaborator to rerun experiments himself?

60. Can I invite myself to a lab to give a talk?

61. Curious case of self-citations and how to monitor self-citers?

62. Inappropriate reference requests from Journal reviewers

63. Why the taboo against naming discoveries after yourself?

64. How to avoid self-plagiarism when adapting dissertation into a paper?

65. Interview by fellow PhD students, not the professor himself

66. Advisor to spend some funds to buy things that make group members feel better working at home. Is it selfish to request a tablet and stuff?

67. How can PhD student repair relationship with supervisor after PhD student engages in independent research without supervisor?

68. What did Israel Gelfand mean by "You have to be fast only to catch fleas," in the context of mathematical research?

69. Will self funding a PhD hurt employment chances?

70. Is it inappropriate for an author to copy and paste from his/her original paper in an extension paper?

71. Do I have to make someone coauthor if he/she solves a problem in StackExchange, asked by myself, which is later used in my paper?

72. Is it plagiarism if I use a text I wrote myself but put on the internet before?

73. As a reviewer, is it inappropriate to make unsolicited comments on another reviewer's comments?

74. Paper with potentially inappropriately-ordered authors, should a journal act?

75. Is it worth self-funding a PhD to attend a top 10 university?

76. Is it acceptable, or advisable, to include self-assessed ratings of your skills on your CV

77. Made a joke in poor taste without thinking in front of students. Is there anything I can do to salvage myself?

78. How to improve myself as a lecturer?

79. Honorific for someone who earned a PhD in philosophy itself?

80. How to deal with author's extensive self-citation?

81. How to improve the language of my master thesis by myself?

82. Is h-index important? Can h-index be used to classify yourself to know whether you are at a given academic rank?

83. Is it inappropriate to contact my Master's supervisor on Facebook or Instagram for a reference while she's on maternity leave?

84. How do I add my ORCID to papers authored by myself?

85. Will self-citation be viewed as self-promotion in academia?

86. Is it wise to try to remove myself from predator mailinglists?

87. I spotted a paper with an absurd amount of self citations. Is this normal?

88. Proper way of refering to yourself, according to graduate level

89. Should I list talks I invited myself to give on my CV?

90. Collaborator has shared a draft paper with a significant amount of self-plagiarism. Should I say something?

91. What is the proper etiquette when declining a professor's Capstone project offer after I myself applied for it?

92. How an international student can get a grant by himself?

93. How to count non-self citations of articles?

94. For interview questions about innovative or engaging teaching, is it OK to say I give lectures in the standard way?

95. How should you refer to yourself in a paper?

96. Should I cite myself in my PhD proposal?

97. Introduction slide of myself on first slide (after title page) in faculty job seminar

98. Is it possible to support oneself as a lifelong graduate student?

99. Should I start my CV by telling about myself?

100. Is it inappropriate to explain why I really want to live where the university is located in my job talk?

101. Can I write a systematic review by myself?

102. Is it significantly inappropriate to wear clothes bearing the name of University X, when working as an official employee at University Y?

103. Is there any value in self-publishing a book as an academic?

104. How to discourage irrelevant self-citation?

105. What happens if a reviewer withdraws himself from peer review process?

106. Do we really need gold open access if publishers permit self-archiving and sharing?

107. Report blatant self-plagiarism to journal editor or PubPeer?

108. Postdoc interview presentation "of yourself and your research"

109. How to introduce myself briefly in a get together for new faculty members?

110. As someone with low grades how can I prepare myself to study MSc in CS in USA?

111. How can I prove my self-studied knowledge?

112. Is it Self-Plagiarism to paraphrase my own published work in my thesis without citation?

113. Reviewer recommending citation of certain papers of specific group of authors may be himself

114. How common are self-funded PhDs in the STEM fields in U.S. universities?

115. Can you still distinguish yourself at a second-tier grad school?

116. Strategies to strengthen self-discipline as a PhD student

117. Is copying an image from a previous paper of mine and citing its source considered self-plagiarism or unprofessional?

118. How to invite yourself to present at another university?

119. Referring to the thesis itself

120. Is it advisable (or even usual) to invite a foreign member of doctoral jury to give a lecture just after the defense? Or is it inappropriate?

121. Is it a good idea to self-fund a postdoc for a year?

122. Should a thesis cite a published paper that originates from the thesis Itself?

123. Is it considered ethical to sign yourself with name followed by PhD when in fact your doctorate was a DTech?

124. How can I make my work available to the community, when it is in conference proceedings that are not online and self archiving is not allowed?

125. Is it a self plagiarism to reuse a section of my previous paper in a new paper?

126. How do I remove myself from academic mailing lists?

127. Earn doctorate by writing thesis by yourself?

128. Which could be considered an appropriate number of self-citations?

129. Plagiarism-checker to prevent self-plagiarism

130. Someone reported cheating during a quiz, but I didn't catch it myself

131. How to deal with inappropriate hiring instructions that are only given verbally?

132. How important is it to present your paper yourself?

133. How to anonymize self-citation of source code repository in IEEE double blind peer review?

134. Motivating myself to study?

135. How to draft a recommendation letter for myself after professor asked me to do so

136. How can I clear myself of emotional attachment when reading reviewer feedback?

137. Is it ethical if I claim the first authorship as I own the idea and the implementation but I do not test the method myself?

138. As a session chair, how to familiarise oneself with the pronunciation of speakers' names?

139. How do I orient myself to the literature concerning a research topic and not be overwhelmed?

140. Possible to defend myself from plagiarism in draft thesis?

141. How to deal with unruly, unengaged students who complain about me?

142. Am I morally obliged to report what I judge as self-plagiarism?

143. Can copyright prevent claims of self-plagiarism?

144. Can someone ever be accused of self-plagiarism after the course is over?

145. How to unintrusively distance myself from control-freak advisor and ride out the end of my PhD?